

Copperconcept in Europe – take a Google Earth tour!

The “Copperconcept in Europe” tour makes you visit in Google Earth the European buildings on www.copperconcept.org, the site that shows and describes some of the most remarkable and interesting applications of copper and its alloys for contemporary architecture: you can see the roofs, facades and roofs in general, made in Europe in recent years.

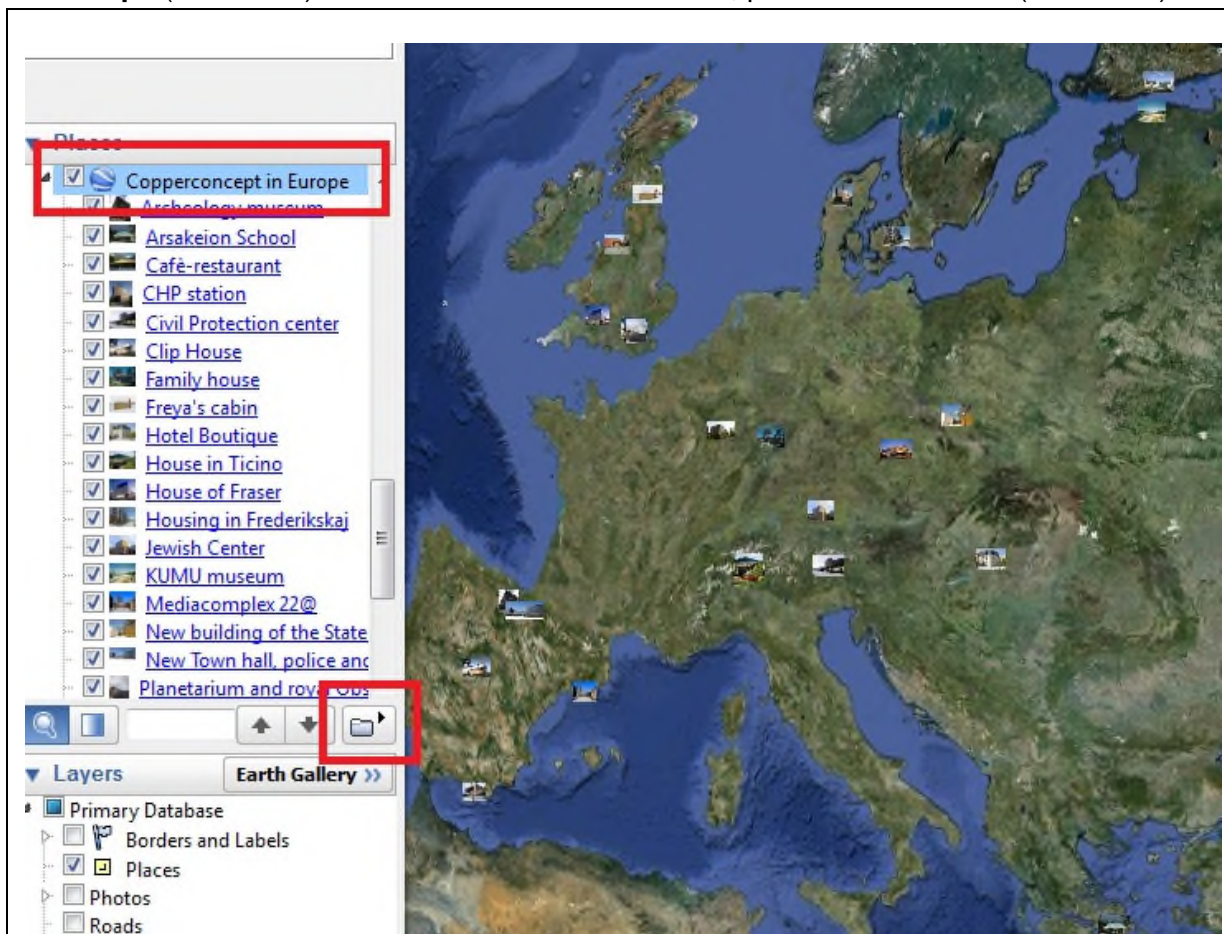

Here are the steps to play the tour:

- 1) If you do not have Google Earth program on your computer, download it from this link: http://www.google.co.uk/intl/en_uk/earth/index.html (or the corresponding local version). The download of the basic version is free.
- 2) Once Google Earth has been downloaded, we advise you to customize the parameters to display a Tour. Go to the command bar on top, click on "Tools" and then on "Options": the window "Google Earth Options" will open; you have to choice the subdirectory folder "Touring" (see below)

- 3) We recommend to set the "Time Between Feature" (i.e. the transition from one place to the following one) between 5 and 8 seconds, "Wait at Feature" (i.e. how much time you want to pause on a building) between 6 and 10 seconds. Do not forget to select "Show balloon when waiting at feature" (to display a larger picture and some details of the building). Finally, click on OK

- 4) Now it's time to download Copperconcept in Europe. In Windows, you can directly open it or save the folder on your computer. To the left of the map, under the folder "Temporary Places", you can see "Copperconcept in Europe.kmz": to display the buildings icons you have to "select" the little box on its left, while to get access to the list you must click on the little white arrow, on its left too.
- 5) Now you can access to each buildings of the Tour in two ways: through the list on the left or through the icons on the map. In both cases, by a simple clicking you get the bigger picture and the description, by a double clicking you get also the geo-location.
- 6) To make the Tour play automatically, go to the left column, click once on Copperconcept in Europe (to select it) and then click the "Start" button, placed under the list (see below).

- 7) Enjoy the vision!
